Celebrating 50 Years of FONZ

Jessie Cohen/NZP

This year, Friends of the National Zoo (FONZ) invites you to help celebrate its 50th birthday. With the support of people like you, FONZ has grown from a small group founded by a few local citizens into a thriving organization with tens of thousands of members from around the world. And most important, it is only with the support of its members that FONZ could have achieved so much in the last half century as a vital partner of the Smithsonian's National Zoo.

It all began on April 10, 1958, when a handful of the Zoo's neighbors came together to revitalize their beloved zoological park, which was at that time deteriorating due to lack of funding. They advocated bringing the Zoo's federal budget entirely under the umbrella of the Smithsonian Institution rather than keeping it divided between the District of Columbia and the Smithsonian, as it was then. Their success established greater financial stability for the Zoo and made possible many future scientific research programs.

This cadre of dedicated citizens has grown tremendously over the last 50 years and continues to seize new opportunities to strengthen the Zoo. FONZ is now essential to the Zoo's daily operations, providing guest services such as parking, concessions, and visitor information. And the Zoo depends on FONZ's more than 40,000 members, 100-plus full-time employees, and 1,500 volunteers to attain its long-term conservation, science, and education goals. In this 2008 ZooGoer calendar, you'll find a small sampling of the many ways that FONZ enriches the National Zoo.

FONZ looks forward to celebrating the past 50 years with you as it continually strives to restore our endangered natural world. Visit www.fonz.org/fonzturns50.htm throughout the year for news about special birthday activities.

In 2008, FONZ turns 50 and reflects on its contributions to the Smithsonian's National Zoo. FONZ staff, members, and volunteers (including Great Ape House exhibit interpreter Leslie Reed, above) provide exciting and enriching experiences for Zoo visitors and are committed to restoring an endangered natural world.

FONZ members give generously to our annual appeals, which help animals at the Zoo and in the wild. The current appeal benefits cheetahs; others have benefited scimitar-horned oryx and giant pandas. FONZ also contributes to the conservation of Sumatran tigers.

Cheetah and oryx: Jessie Cohen/NZP. Giant pandas: Ann Batdorf/NZP. Tigers: Meghan Murphy/NZP.

Behavior watchers observe animals such as caracals, butterflies, kori bustards, and giant pandas—sometimes around the clock—to obtain valuable data for Zoo scientists. Just before 4 a.m. on July 9, 2005, one of these dedicated FONZ volunteers witnessed the birth of giant panda cub Tai Shan.
